1 Introduction: A Message from Our CEO

Trust Matters

Dear Colleagues,

In an unpredictable world where change is constant, one thing remains certain: ethics, integrity, and compliance drive the trust that is core to innovation, economic growth, and strong, sustainable development. The way we do business matters.

At SAP, we are committed to building the trust of all our stakeholders. Our Global Code of Ethics and Business Conduct for Employees (“Code”) helps us protect our business and reputation as well as our colleagues and ecosystem. It guides us in achieving the highest standards of ethical business that we expect from ourselves, and from our partners and suppliers.

It is on all of us to uphold these standards, adhere to this Code, and speak out if we feel something is not right. Our global team of ethics and compliance experts is here for you, to provide the support and guidance needed to make strong ethical and compliant choices.

Together, let’s ensure we win the right way.

Best regards,

Christian Klein

Chief Executive Officer and Member of the Executive Board of SAP SE

2 Ethical Business and You

Do the Right Thing

At SAP, our purpose is to help the world run better and improve people's lives. Together, we seek to bring out the best in every business – starting with ourselves.

2.1 Bring Out Your Best

SAP expects all employees to adhere to the principles associated with our culture, contributing to ethical behavior and robust compliance throughout the organization.

You can demonstrate your commitment to ethics and compliance by ensuring that you:

- Act with integrity and encourage colleagues to do the same.
- Familiarize yourself and act in accordance with our policies and guidelines, including this Code.
- Complete the annual Code confirmation and mandatory compliance trainings in a timely manner.
- Seek help and guidance on matters of compliance – for example, from your manager, HR, SAP Legal, or the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC).
- Raise concerns over situations relating to potential noncompliance by using our reporting channels. For further information about reporting channels, see the “Speak Out” section of this Code.

2.2 Lead at Your Best

SAP entrusts you, as a leader, to inspire and support employees through your words and actions.

In the spirit and letter of this Code, SAP expects you to lead with integrity. This includes:

- Being a role model for ethical behavior and the principles of SAP culture and this Code.
- Fostering an environment of open communication where employees can – and know how to – raise concerns about ethics and compliance without fear of retaliation.
- Taking accountability for your team members to consistently follow company policies and related processes. This includes supporting awareness, driving timely Code confirmation and completion of mandatory compliance training, and taking appropriate action in the event of violations.

2.3 Make Ethical Choices

Ethical decision making is essential for maintaining trust and ensuring the sustainable success of our company.

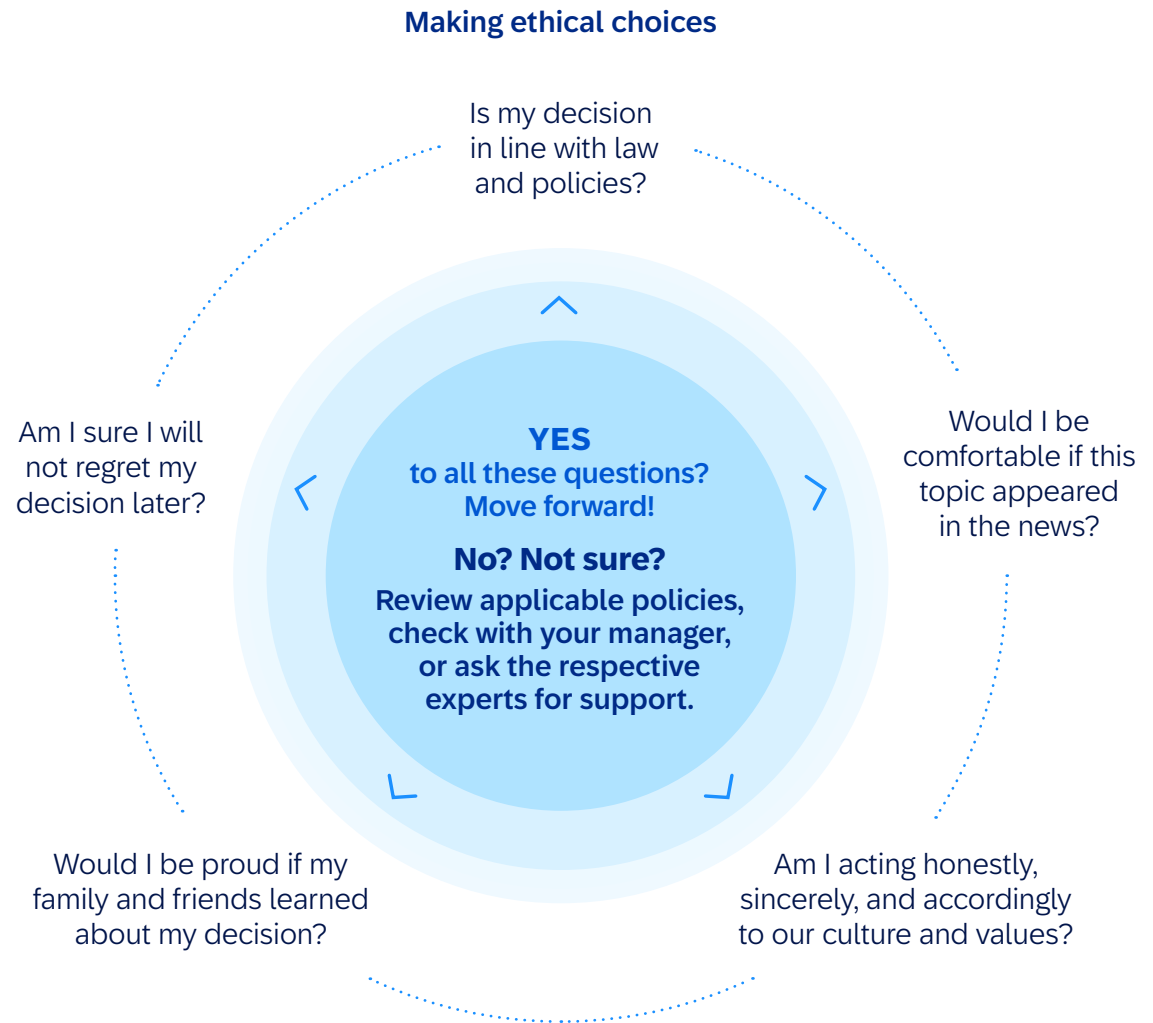

SAP relies on you and our ecosystem – including customers, partners, and suppliers – to assess every decision and ensure that every action made on behalf of and related to our organization is legal, fair, and compliant with our policies and guidelines, this Code, and any law or regulation.

The Code provides us with the necessary guidance so that we can act with integrity. However, many of the principles it describes are general in nature. The Code cannot cover every situation that may arise. Therefore, SAP expects that you adhere to our global policies, the spirit of the Code, and other governance documents for detailed guidance.

We also recommend use of our guiding questions to make conscious ethical choices.

3 Raising Concerns

Speak Out

Prevention is best. However, if something doesn't look right, sound right, or feel right, it probably is not right. We expect you and our ecosystem to speak out on any actual or potential misconduct of which you become aware.

The earlier SAP learns about an issue, the greater the chances to mitigate potential harm to SAP, employees, and those doing business with us.

We recommend you discuss any serious concerns about ethics and compliance with your manager or your Field Compliance Officer within the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC). You can also raise your concerns using the various reporting channels. See the “Our Reporting Channels” section of this Code.

3.1 Our Reporting Channels

SAP expects you to speak out on any serious concerns about ethics and compliance relating to the Code or any laws and regulations – in good faith, confidentially, and if desired, anonymously – using Speak Out at SAP.

Speak Out is available online or via the integrated 24x7 helpline, which has local language support, whether you are reporting from inside or outside of SAP.

We ask you to provide as much information as possible when making a report. Mere rumors are not sufficient; however, actual proof of wrongdoing is not necessarily required.

You can also use the following additional reporting channels:

Concerns relating to bribery, corruption, or substantial fraud

There are also third-party channels for reporting potential misconduct that involves breaches of EU laws and national implementations thereof according to the EU Directive 2019/1937 on the protection of whistleblowers.

For support relating to a particular topic managed by a specific area of our business, you are always free to reach out to the respective department directly. A list of department-specific contact channels is available on SAP One /go/speakout.

The Global Ombuds Office is also a confidential, impartial, and independent contact to support employees in any kind of difficult or conflicting situation. They provide informal counselling and conflict de-escalation services, and can assist in raising formal complaints where applicable.

3.2 You Make a Difference

SAP is committed to thoroughly assessing every concern shared through our reporting channels and, where appropriate, conducting careful, objective, and professional investigations of the matter by the responsible expert departments (for example, Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC), Internal Audit, Global People Compliance Office, or Corporate Security Investigations).

When SAP carries out an investigation, the company requires your full cooperation to help resolve a matter, including providing truthful information about work-related matters to SAP personnel or external counsel investigating compliance concerns on behalf of SAP.

Where appropriate, SAP will carry out consequence management. Such consequences may relate to employment law (disciplinary sanctions and clawbacks) and external investigations, action in the civil courts, or criminal prosecution. The company may also apply acquired insights to further strengthen our policies, processes, and controls.

3.3 SAP Protects You

It can take courage to report a concern. You may ask yourself: Is what I am observing really wrongdoing? Will I face consequences if I report it? Is it worth it?

SAP does not tolerate any form of retaliation against those who raise a concern in good faith to help protect and prevent damage to SAP, and who cooperate in a company investigation.

The company has strict rules and safeguards to ensure and protect the confidentiality of reports made through the reporting channels provided. For example, we strictly limit access to these reports to a small number of specifically trained and authorized experts.

Should you feel that any forms of retaliation occur despite our precautions, we ask that you raise them via Speak Out at SAP. We can draw on additional robust procedures to address your protection.

We equally do not tolerate any personal or false attacks aimed at specific individuals. Dishonest, bad faith, or otherwise abusive reports are prohibited and could result in disciplinary action.

4 Ensuring Trust in the Workplace

We Strive to Foster Trust

4.1 Diversity and Inclusion, Anti-Discrimination, and Anti-Harassment

4.1.1 Diversity and inclusion

SAP behaviors reflect company values and inspire appreciation for all aspects of diversity and inclusion.

At SAP, every person must be treated with dignity and respect. Every employee plays a role in maintaining professional, respectful, and inclusive work relationships by conducting themselves within the spirit and intent of this Code.

We proactively promote diversity, equality, inclusion, and social justice and work to ensure that our workforce reflects gender parity and the demographics of the regions where we have employees. We commit ourselves to be respectful, professional, compliant, and inclusive, and to foster employee engagement, spark innovation, and drive customer success.

The Global Diversity & Inclusion Office is at hand for any related questions.

4.1.2 Anti-discrimination and anti-harassment

SAP embraces and encourages different perspectives. We are made stronger by our unique combination of diverse characteristics, including but not limited to, culture, race, ethnicity, age, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, physical or mental ability, and different work-life situations.

The company makes every effort to ensure that all stages of the employee lifecycle are inclusive to enable employee success, hold leaders accountable, and build a diverse environment – both internally and within our ecosystem.

Therefore, SAP commits to a workplace free from discrimination, harassment, bullying, mobbing, or retaliation. We prioritize a work environment where employees, suppliers, customers, and partners can be confident that their integrity, dignity, rights, health, safety, and well-being are valued and respected. Every employee must act as a role model.

We encourage you to report any concern or behavior that is inconsistent with our values and the regulations outlined in SAP's Global Anti-Discrimination Policy to the Global People Compliance Office through the various reporting channels available. See the “Our Reporting Channels” section of this Code.

More information

SAP Global Anti-Discrimination Policy

4.2 Healthy Organization

Our purpose to make the world run better and improve people's lives includes caring for the health, safety, and well-being of everyone at SAP.

We believe that there is no organizational resilience and health without individual health. SAP and our leaders take ownership for workplaces and a caring culture that foster physical health, safety, and mental well-being.

Employees are empowered to take care of their health with company programs and offerings – and are encouraged to help shape our caring culture and working conditions by using feedback opportunities. Our success is tracked through the Business Health Culture Index (BHCI) and the Stress-Satisfaction Index, measured by regular employee surveys.

Our Global Health, Safety & Well-Being team as part of the Future of Work organization – together with partners in HR, Real Estate and Facilities, Occupational Safety, Physical Security, and Sustainability – provides information, education, and support to foster a healthy working culture and a supportive environment for all employees.

4.3 Conflicts of Interest

SAP respects your personal interests and your private life. SAP also expects that you are loyal to our company and act in the interests of SAP. If your private or financial interests or relations collide with those of SAP or could be perceived to collide with SAP's interests, a potential conflict of interest arises.

Potential conflicts of interest can arise from many situations, such as secondary activities, external board or advisory positions, personal relationships, or financial investments.

Even the appearance of a conflict of interest can be problematic and must be avoided at all times. You are responsible for disclosing any potential conflicts of interest, actual or perceived, as early as possible, or as soon as you become aware. Seek advice and, if warranted, approval from the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC).

4.4 Protection of SAP Assets

We all use various tangible and intangible SAP assets to help us perform our work. These assets are vital to support SAP business both internally and externally, and as such, you need to look after them and manage them appropriately. You must commit to guard against waste, abuse, or attacks on these assets and use them only for the purpose for which they were purchased in our business environment. Once assets are obsolete or no longer required, you must return them to SAP.

Always keep in mind that the assets purchased by SAP belong to SAP and are intended for business purposes. Before ordering goods and services, make sure you have the necessary spending authority. You must order goods or services on behalf of SAP only for legitimate business purposes and to fulfill your work requirements. SAP does not permit ordering for private use or for use by family and personal contacts.

If in doubt, contact the Global Security & Cloud Compliance, Global IT Asset Management, or Global Procurement teams.

4.5 Internal Gift Giving

Giving a gift is a nice way to express appreciation and thanks to a person or group. However, gifts between colleagues or teams are considered private matters, and in general, you should not expect to be reimbursed.

5 Ensuring Trust in Our Business

We Follow the Law and Regulations

At SAP, we all have a personal responsibility to uphold and ensure the letter and spirit of our Code in our individual roles every day. It is important that we are aware of, and never intentionally violate, applicable laws and regulations. Violating applicable laws, regulations, or this Code, or encouraging others to do so, exposes SAP to risk, including risk to our reputation. Therefore, this behavior could result in disciplinary action up to and including termination of employment.

Violations of laws or regulations may also result in legal proceedings including, in some circumstances, civil and criminal penalties that could affect us personally and professionally, and risk adverse consequences to SAP.

We each have a personal responsibility to uphold and ensure the letter and spirit of our Code.

5.1 Fraud

SAP's commitment to honesty and integrity demands that we prevent, counter, report, and investigate fraud wherever it occurs. Fraud can have a devastating effect on our company and our environment by destroying trust, resulting in significant financial loss and other long-term business repercussions.

Fraud involves misrepresenting or concealing the truth to cause a loss of property or money to another person or SAP. This includes, for example, theft of materials or supplies, falsifying expense claims, or improper reporting of financial transactions and resource allocation.

We expect you, as well as our partners, suppliers, and customers, to abide by SAP's commitment, and to not engage in any fraudulent activities. You must immediately report any instances of fraud, either suspected or actual, to the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC) or through SAP's reporting channels, such as Speak Out at SAP. This helps us to prevent losses and to reduce fraud in the future.

5.2 Organizational Conflicts of Interest/ Government Procurement Processes

Organizational Conflicts of Interest ("OCI") can arise when existing SAP relationships with external parties create an actual or potential conflict of interest for SAP on a government contract. This situation can also arise when the nature of the work to be performed by SAP creates a situation of actual or potential conflict of interest relating to another government contract that SAP has or is pursuing.

For example, SAP might have access to a competitor's cost or other proprietary information if that competitor is a subcontractor on a government contract, which could provide an unfair competitive advantage when competing on another government contract.

If SAP participates in a government procurement process that could give rise to an actual or potential OCI, you must consult both SAP Global Government Affairs and the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC) for advance review and approval of the bid. Although an OCI might exist, participation in procurement is possible if the government contracting officer agrees that sufficient actions are undertaken to avoid, neutralize, or mitigate the actual or potential OCI, and that has been properly documented. If you are concerned that a potential OCI may exist, you must disclose this concern to the OEC.

5.3 Bribery and Corruption

SAP has zero tolerance for all forms of bribery and corruption. Supported by the SAP Executive Board and the senior leadership team, we will forgo business opportunities rather than pay bribes or tolerate corruption.

5.3.1 Win the Right Way

We observe all applicable anticorruption laws and regulations of the countries in which we do business.

Giving and receiving benefits (including money, gifts, meals, and invitations to events) can help to build good working relationships and goodwill among companies and individuals. However, they could also be perceived as an improper advantage and raise concerns regarding the integrity and independence of all involved parties. They can also create a conflict of interest (or the appearance of impropriety) and even violate laws.

This means that you may not offer, promise, receive, or give anything of value to improperly influence decision making or an action. This requirement applies not only to every one of us at SAP but also to individuals and companies working with or on behalf of SAP (for example partners and suppliers), including those with close personal connections to the recipient.

The offering and acceptance of any benefits must meet the following basic and decisive principles:

- Serve a legitimate business purpose (that is, encourage or improve a business relationship) without the intention of an unfair advantage.
- Observe the applicable Value Limits for country, format, and specific target group as published on SAP One.
- Ensure adherence to all applicable laws and internal policies.
- Be made in a transparent manner.

Bribery can take many forms under the guise of common business or social practices. If you suspect potential bribery, you must report the situation to SAP (see “Our Reporting Channels” section of this Code). If in doubt, consult the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC).

SAP works closely with our ecosystem to achieve our goal of making the world run better. However, third parties can increase our risks, particularly regarding corruption and bribery. To avoid any illegal act, all business transactions through a member of our ecosystem must be in full compliance with all applicable laws, rules, regulations, and policies. SAP expects our partners and suppliers to adhere to the respective Partner and Supplier Codes of Conduct. Accordingly, SAP employees are expected to support this adherence.

5.3.2 Meals and Invitations to Events

You may offer or accept meals and invitations to events, provided they meet the above-mentioned basic principles. For meals and invitations to or from third parties, you must adhere to the policies for business events and hospitality.

In particular, employees must pay attention to the event type (on-site or virtual, business, or hospitality); the invited guests (government officials and accompanying persons such as “plus one”); and timing (parties in a competitive bid or sales cycle). These factors influence whether the invitation to a meal or other event is allowed.

5.3.3 External Gifts

In general, you may offer or accept gifts and gifts in kind to or from current or prospective customers, suppliers, competitors, or partners if the above-mentioned basic principles are met and exclusions below are followed.

No gifts may be offered or accepted with a value higher than that identified in the Value Limits published on SAP One.

Gifts to government officials or public sector employees are strictly prohibited, as are gifts to customers during a competitive sales cycle.

In some contexts, and in some countries in a business relationship, it is customary to exchange gifts of higher value. In these cases, you may accept these gifts in the name of SAP but must immediately hand them over to the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC) to be used for the wider benefit of SAP employees or as a donation to a good cause. You may not personally keep these gifts.

5.3.4 Cash or Cash Equivalents, Facilitation Payments

The offer or acceptance of cash or cash equivalents (for example, gift cards, vouchers, checks, or gift certificates) is not permitted.

Facilitation or “grease” payments are also prohibited.

5.3.5 Corporate Sponsorships, Memberships, and Donations

SAP occasionally engages in sponsorship activities with other organizations to support our purpose and in return for legitimate commercial benefits such as branding rights and hospitality.

We also make donations to support charitable causes.

SAP is a member of many trade associations, coalitions, and professional societies that represent the interests of the technology industry and the broader business community. We also advocate on public policy issues of importance to SAP and the communities we serve.

We never engage in sponsorship activities, make donations, or use memberships for improper purposes to influence a business decision or those actions that are contrary to applicable laws, regulations, and our policies. The engagement in all three of these activities requires approval through the official process, up to and including approval by the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC).

To avoid even the appearance of inappropriate influence, we reject sponsorship activities with, or donation requests from, customers and their families and close personal contacts during a competitive sales cycle.

5.4 Artificial Intelligence

SAP believes that artificial intelligence (AI) has the potential to unlock boundless potential for businesses, governments, and society. As is common with innovation and technological advancements, AI also has the potential to create economic, political, and social challenges, depending upon how it is used and implemented.

SAP is committed to complying with all relevant legislation and to the ethical development, deployment, and sale of SAP-developed AI systems. Our Global AI Policy defines a group-wide minimum standard for the development, deployment, sale, and use of SAP AI applications and solutions, including assignment of clear responsibilities within SAP.

5.5 Intellectual Property, Confidential Information, and Personal Data and Privacy Rights

We are all responsible for protecting the intellectual property, confidentiality, integrity, and availability of confidential, personal, and proprietary information and data, no matter if it belongs to SAP, us as employees, or others.

We must ensure that personal data is processed according to data protection and privacy rules and regulations worldwide. The respective SAP experts in Legal, especially the Cyber, Litigation, and IP teams; Global Security; and Global Data Protection & Privacy are at hand to guide us in this endeavor.

5.5.1 Intellectual property

SAP intellectual property (IP) is one of our most valuable assets. This includes confidential information, patents, copyrights, trademarks, and trade secrets. Therefore, it is vital that you take appropriate steps to protect SAP IP.

It is also important that you respect the IP rights of third parties, including our competitors, and avoid unauthorized use. It is particularly important also for new colleagues joining SAP from partners or competitors to adhere to these rules as stipulated in your work contract and the SAP Global Intellectual Property (IP) Policy.

More information

SAP Global Intellectual Property \(IP\) Policy

5.5.2 Confidential information

The exchange of information is a vital part of every business. Before sharing any SAP information with third parties, you need to evaluate the appropriate classification of that information in accordance with SAP's Global Information Classification and Handling Standard.

It is appropriate to share publicly available information about SAP. For exchange of all other information with third parties, either by SAP or a third party, we require a nondisclosure agreement (NDA) or other appropriate agreement.

You should also be mindful of being exposed unnecessarily to confidential information of third parties during business.

The exchange of information labelled as confidential within SAP requires certain prerequisites and administrative measures as defined in the SAP Global Information Classification and Handling Standard.

5.5.3 Protection of personal data and privacy rights

SAP is committed to and strives to protect the rights of individuals, particularly the right to data protection and privacy, strengthening our reputation as a sustainable and trustworthy partner in the market. We have implemented safeguards to help protect the fundamental rights of everyone whose data is processed by SAP, whether they are customers, suppliers, partners, prospects, employees, or applicants. Therefore, all of us must respect applicable data protection and privacy rights when processing personal data during our daily work.

You are responsible for ensuring that all practices involving the processing of personal data within the course of your work comply with applicable laws and internal regulations. You are required to handle all personal data that could be accessed within the scope or your role with strict confidentiality, and not to collect, process, or use personal data without authorization. Processing means any operation that is performed on personal data, whether or not by automated means.

5.6 Insider Trading and Inside Information

In numerous jurisdictions, publicly traded financial instruments such as shares and bonds, and their derivatives, are subject to strict statutory rules. These regulations prohibit the unlawful disclosure of inside information and its use in trading.

You must ensure that when trading in publicly traded financial instruments of SAP SE or SAP-listed subsidiaries, customers, suppliers, competitors, or partners, you do not do so based on inside information, and you must not unlawfully disclose inside information.

Except in circumstances where the prohibition of insider dealing applies, you may decide at your personal discretion whether to dispose of or acquire SAP SE or an SAP subsidiary's shares or bonds or their derivatives. However, to avoid any implication that you are involved in insider trading, the SAP Executive Board urgently appeals to all of us not to trade in SAP SE or SAP subsidiary's shares or bonds or their derivatives during the official blackout periods. You are asked to comply with this (legally nonbinding) appeal. Deviations from this guideline should be made only in emergencies, for example, where an employee has a sudden unexpected cash requirement. Cases of doubt should be discussed with the SAP SE Capital Market Compliance team beforehand.

If you have questions in this regard, especially about capital market or insider law or the blackout period, contact the SAP SE Capital Market Compliance team.

More information

SAP Global Insider Regulations Policy

5.7 Financial Statements, Disclosures, and Internal Accounting Controls

Accurate, complete, and reliable records are crucial to our business to avoid reputational and/or financial damages. We are committed to maintaining accurate company records and accounts to ensure compliance with applicable legislation, tax rules, and ethical business practices, and to prevent fraudulent activities. We are responsible for ensuring that the information we record, process, and analyze is accurate and is recorded in accordance with applicable legal or accounting principles, applying SAP's policies and guidelines. Internal controls need to be in place.

All parties involved need to ensure that these records are made secure and readily available to those with a need to know the information on a timely basis to fulfill internal and external requirements. All company records must be complete, accurate, and reliable in all material respects. There is never a reason to make false or misleading entries. Undisclosed or unrecorded funds, payments, or receipts are inconsistent with our business practices and are prohibited.

If you become aware of or suspect any inaccuracy in SAP's records, you must promptly declare these to Corporate Financial Reporting and the Office of Ethics and Compliance.

Corporate Financial Reporting is available for comprehensive guidance.

5.8 Export Controls and Trade Sanctions

Export control laws regulate exports, re-exports, and in-country transfers of items (including software) that have both military and commercial application (so called dual-use goods). These laws are intended to control and restrict delivery of potentially dangerous technology including dual-use goods, military items, and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. They address national security and other concerns, for example, civil-military fusion and human rights abuses. Provisions of SAP software and services are within the scope of these regulations regardless of how they are delivered.

Trade sanctions impose restrictions on certain countries, regions, entities, or individuals for various economic, diplomatic, and national security reasons. The scope of trade sanctions can range from a comprehensive prohibition to do business to specific economic and financial measures.

Because of the risk associated with these trade sanctions and as a matter of corporate policy, SAP products and services are not available in certain countries and regions. Furthermore, SAP products and services cannot be sold to entities and individuals with whom transactions are prohibited in accordance with any applicable sanctioned party lists.

We follow such laws and regulations, including without limitation the laws of Germany, the European Union, the United States, and applicable local regulations and obligations as stated in applicable documents available on the Export Control SharePoint.

Contact the Export Control Legal team with any questions or concerns.

More information

SAP Global Export and Sanctions Compliance Policy

5.9 Anti-Money Laundering and Commitment to Combating the Financing of Terrorism

Money laundering and the financing of terrorism are global issues with far-reaching and serious consequences. We observe all applicable anti-money laundering and combating-terrorism financing laws of the countries in which we do business.

Money laundering is the process of converting illegal proceeds so that funds are made to appear legitimate. Very often, this is attempted through cash transactions, as the payer is harder to identify in these cases. For this reason, SAP does not accept cash transactions of €10,000 and above.

However, money laundering is not limited to cash transactions. Complex commercial transactions can hide financing of criminal activity such as terrorism, the illegal narcotics trade, bribery, and fraud. They can also hide the origin of the funds or their use in these activities. Involvement in such transactions undermines our integrity, damages our reputation, and can expose SAP and all of us to severe sanctions.

SAP is committed to conducting business only with reputable customers and business partners involved in legitimate business activities and transactions. We also forbid engagement in transactions that facilitate money laundering and the financing of terrorism. We take affirmative steps to detect and prevent unacceptable or illegal forms of payment and financial transactions.

6 Ensuring Trust with Our Ecosystem

We Commit to Our Ecosystem

6.1 Business Relationships with Organizations

We do not maintain business relationships with organizations that are themselves, or are supporters of, antisocial forces, terrorists, or criminal groups.

6.2 Contractual Changes and Unauthorized Commitments

Transparency in business relationships is crucial to the success of SAP. Our business partners and investors expect us to operate in a fair and transparent manner. To further our goal of transparency, we must make sure that commitments to our business partners are accurate, truthful, appropriately approved in advance, and ultimately incorporated into written agreements that cover the full understanding of all involved parties. All parties should be aware of the entire understanding of our agreements.

You must not agree to any changes, qualifications, or amendments to SAP contracts or general terms and conditions, whether by supplementary agreement, side letter, or otherwise, without proper approval. Also, any other unauthorized commitments are strictly prohibited.

Any of these actions made without proper oversight or internal controls could lead to accounting and financial errors and irregularities and could expose SAP to potentially fraudulent activities.

More information

SAP Global Customer Commitment Policy

6.3 Reciprocity Deals

We must ensure that we do not enter reciprocity deals in which SAP accepts goods and services from another company only on condition that the other company obtains SAP products or services in exchange.

Deviations from this rule are permissible only in exceptional circumstances and if in alignment with the respective review and approval processes (including Executive Board involvement).

6.4 Conduct with Customers

6.4.1 General

The trust that our customers place in us is both an honor and an obligation that we must earn every day. That's why we act with integrity at every point of the customer value journey.

SAP is committed to dealing fairly with its employees, customers, partners, suppliers, and competitors. We are expected to promote SAP's products and services in a manner consistent with the customer's expressed financial needs and goals. We provide sufficient information to allow customers to make informed decisions voluntarily and without any form of coercion or undue influence.

We are prohibited from taking unfair advantage of anyone through manipulation, abuse of privileged information, misrepresentation of material facts, or any other unfair dealing practice.

6.4.2 Boycotts

An agreement with a customer, supplier, competitor, or partner of SAP not to conduct business with, or to not deliver goods or provide services to any other customer, supplier, competitor, partner, or service provider, is unlawful.

For example, you must be extremely careful if you discuss with one of our suppliers the competitive terms of another supplier. Discussions of this sort raise suspicion of an unlawful understanding. A unilateral decision not to sell to a particular customer can become a problem if SAP has such a strong position in the market concerned that the customer is dependent on its contractual relationship with us.

6.4.3 Exclusive Contracts

You must not ask customers to buy products and services exclusively from us as SAP or to refrain from buying the products of a competitor if this would impact competition in the market.

6.4.4 License Compliance

To protect our intellectual property and mitigate financial risks, SAP regularly reviews customers' license compliance. Such verifications or audits are also in the interest of customers, allowing for investment optimization and mitigation of financial exposure risks.

Using the results of license verifications to pressure customers into closing sales transactions could damage trust and harm SAP's reputation. The Global Adoption & Experience CoE is the only team responsible for performing these reviews, assuring that they are conducted with customer focus, transparency, and integrity.

6.5 Conduct with Suppliers

6.5.1 General

Guided by the Global Procurement Organization, SAP must govern our conduct with suppliers through sound judgment and with absolute integrity. The most important consideration is the upholding of SAP's interests.

We must ensure that SAP's suppliers comply with the legal requirements in the country of manufacture and country of sale.

Equally, we must ensure that our suppliers have been subjected to risk-appropriate due diligence where required and that our suppliers have requisite qualifications and/or experience to serve the needs of SAP.

Accordingly, you must not coerce any supplier to buy SAP products in return for SAP's purchase of that supplier's goods or services. Naturally, however, you may seek to sell products to our suppliers as you do to any other customer.

Relationships with our suppliers often include access to trade secrets and suppliers' know-how. In that regard, you must exercise the utmost care and ensure compliance with the Code. Do not pass on information concerning a supplier's problems or shortcomings to any other supplier or partner or any other person outside of SAP.

6.5.2 Bids, Estimates, and Proof of Services and Goods

We must ensure that all qualified suppliers are fully and equally notified of SAP's technical and commercial bid requirements. The same applies to any details, changes, and additions to these requirements subsequently provided.

SAP considers the awarding of any contract based on the long-term cost to SAP, including the costs associated with defective goods and services, as well as the value of the long-term business relationship with SAP suppliers.

Before approving invoices for goods or services, ensure that you have verified that those goods or services have been provided.

6.5.3 External Consultants

When engaging external consultants, you must ensure that:

- Consulting contracts are always concluded in writing.
- Payments are made only for activities that are usually remunerated and are lawful.

6.6 Conduct with Competitors

6.6.1 General

One of the most serious infringements of the provisions of competition law is the existence of an understanding between competitors. Agreements and understandings among competitors about pricing, conditions of sale, volume of production, or the sharing of markets are strictly unlawful. You must not participate in agreements or understandings of this nature.

You might find yourself in scenarios where it is not obvious who is a competitor. For instance, companies that do not compete in any product or service might compete in attracting talent. Agreeing not to poach each other's employees would be anti-competitive. Partners can also be competitors, in particular where SAP runs a dual distribution model. In such instances, the rules for competitive conduct must be applied to partners as well.

The SAP Legal team can help identify such scenarios and provide detailed guidance in your day-to-day business.

6.6.2 Price Fixing Among Competitors

All forms of price fixing among competitors are forbidden. This ban also includes all agreements and understandings that only indirectly affect prices or other conditions of sale, such as discounts. You must not participate in setting maximum and minimum prices or exchanging information about future pricing models with competitors.

In individual cases, it might be necessary – as part of a reseller agreement – to provide information to the resale partner, who could also be a competitor, about the future pricing model so that internal licensing payments can be adjusted. You must not convey such information without first checking with the SAP Legal team on the implications under competition law.

6.6.3 Competitive Restrictions

Joint ventures, collaboration agreements, and mergers among competitors can affect free competition. In many cases, they require official approval. Often their legality also must be checked in multiple systems of law because they can have consequences in other countries. Therefore, you must ensure that the SAP Legal team checks the legality of such plans as early as possible and, in any case, before they are implemented.

Contact with competitors

You must not discuss internal matters with competitors. This includes matters such as pricing and conditions of sale, costs, overviews of the market, organizational processes, or other confidential information, from which competitors could draw competitive advantage over SAP.

Obtaining competitor information

SAP has a legitimate interest in obtaining information about competitors and evaluating all published information about its competing companies (for example, publications about products and pricing).

SAP receives a net benefit from competitive information only when it is obtained lawfully and ethically. Therefore, you must not seek to obtain trade secrets or other confidential or secret information about a competitor using dishonest means.

We seek to avoid exposure to competitive information that is confidential, is otherwise restricted, or has no legitimate source. Therefore, you must not accept, read, or use information about products and plans of competitors that is identified or identifiable as confidential information unless you are authorized by the competitor to do so.

Actual or alleged infringement or misappropriation of competitors' confidential information or intellectual property rights can lead to litigation, which, in turn, can result in monetary loss and the inability to provide certain products or services to our customers. In addition, actual or alleged infringement or misappropriation could also damage SAP's reputation as a trustworthy business partner.

Accordingly, you may gather and use nonconfidential information about competitors, including information that can be found on competitors' Web sites.

You always must keep in mind that we are legally prohibited from:

- Collecting confidential competitive information.
- Making untrue statements about competitors.
- Gathering competitive information in breach of a contract.
- Misrepresenting the relationship to SAP to obtain competitive information.
- Violating the copyrights of a competitor.
- Hiring third parties to engage in such practices.

6.7 Conduct with Partners

Partners support our varied business interests. That is why we must trust our partners, be loyal, conduct business with and through partners with integrity, and treat every partner with equality and equity.

You must present our partners with equal opportunities, always be objective, and provide transparency. Ensure that you treat them without bias or unjust preference. For example, you must be equitable when handling competing bids from several partners for the same customer.

Equally, we must ensure to undertake risk-appropriate due diligence of our partners, where required, and that our partners have requisite qualifications and/or experience to serve the needs of SAP and our customers.

If a partner is also a customer, supplier, or competitor of SAP, you must also observe this Code's rules concerning customers, suppliers, and competitors.

For any questions related to conduct with partners, contact the SAP Legal team and Partner Ecosystem Success organization.

7 Ensuring Trust by Society

We Help the World Run Better
and Improve
People's Lives

SAP's purpose to help the world run better and improve people's lives is the guiding principle for our business strategy. We stand for this higher purpose beyond economic success. We strive to create positive social, environmental, and economic impact while respecting planetary boundaries and human rights – both as an exemplar as well as enabler for our customers. Our efforts focus on creating a sustainable future for SAP, our customers, and society in line with our commitment to the United Nations Global Compact and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

Our purpose is to help the world run better and improve people's lives.

7.1 Communication

We must ensure that we communicate clearly, effectively, and responsibly. This safeguards a high standard of dissemination of information concerning SAP's business activities, strategy, or other company affairs and ensures that we act in accordance with applicable laws and regulations at all times.

Only employees who are expressly authorized to communicate on behalf of SAP may engage with members of the media, industry analysts, government representatives, or other influencers. SAP-related contact with these audiences must be coordinated and authorized by SAP Global Communications. Any contact with the financial community must be coordinated and authorized by SAP Investor Relations.

We encourage communication among employees, customers, partners, and others. Be polite, honest, and respectful, and always identify yourself and make clear whether you are speaking on behalf of yourself or on behalf of SAP.

Social media enables us to learn from and share information with our stakeholders, as well as communicate with the public about our company. In addition to following all company policies, a general rule to remember when using social media is to think about the effect of the statements you make. Keep in mind that these transmissions are permanent and easily transferable and can affect our company's reputation and relationships with colleagues, customers, partners, and others.

Your employment postings on Web sites and social media platforms may include the fact that you work for SAP, your job title, a high-level job description, and your general office location. However, no specific project or initiative details or proprietary software information or names should be included. Do not disclose internal, confidential, or proprietary information about our business, our suppliers, our partners, or our customers. Review the social media guidelines before posting any material.

SAP Marketing and SAP Global Communications, in collaboration with SAP Legal counterparts, provide guidelines to help you when communicating about SAP to ensure that statements about our company, products, customers, and partners are truthful and defensible.

7.2 Human Rights

We respect and advance human rights throughout our own business activities and along our value chain. Human rights refer to basic rights and freedoms that every person is entitled to. These are recognized in the International Bill of Human Rights and the International Labour Organization's Core Labour Rights Conventions, such as the prohibition of forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking.

We take guidance from the United Nations' Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights and maintain a range of policies and procedures designed to ensure that we treat everyone with respect. We commit to prevent and mitigate risks of forced labor, child labor, discrimination, health-related hazards, withholding of adequate living wage, restrictions to freedom of association, or other human rights risks occurring in our own business or along the value chain.

As an employee, you contribute to respecting human rights by regarding them as a fundamental principle in your interactions with colleagues, suppliers, customers, and other business partners.

We expect all employees and business partners to avoid complicity in human rights abuses and be vigilant for potential violations of which you become aware. SAP encourages you to raise any concerns or violations relating to human rights through the various reporting channels available, see the “Our Reporting Channels” section of this Code.

7.3 Corporate Social Responsibility

The SAP Corporate Social Responsibility (SAP CSR) team is responsible for setting and executing SAP's CSR strategy. This strategy aims to bring to life our purpose through strategic partnerships and programs that deliver sustainable social and environmental impact and long-term business value. The team is responsible for managing SAP's donation budget, all corporate giving, and oversees all volunteerism.

If you request a donation, you must adhere to the respective mandatory SAP donation process. You must not make any donation commitments to potential recipients, such as the promise of a donation, before receiving approval through the official SAP donation process.

7.4 Commitment to Improving Our Environmental Performance

Sustainability is an integral part of our purpose to help the world run better and improve people's lives. SAP is committed to improve and invest in the environmental performance of SAP's value chain and solutions to respect planetary boundaries. Therefore, we conduct business in an environmentally responsible manner and comply with relevant environmental laws, regulations, and standards.

We commit to improve our environmental impacts and prevent pollution by reducing resource and water consumption, carbon emissions, energy, and waste, including electronic waste, among others. To do so, we provide the necessary resources and information to efficiently manage our environmental performance and achieve our objectives in the SAP Global Environmental Policy. These objectives and the impact of our operations and solutions are analyzed, managed, and reported throughout their lifecycle.

We are all responsible for keeping environmental protection in mind when making business decisions and implementing sustainable practices that support SAP's sustainability goals. We can achieve this through sustainable product design and development, efficient use of resources, or other activities and behaviors that reduce our environmental footprint.

7.5 Political Activities

Society is partly determined and shaped by politics and the political activity of its citizens.

7.5.1 Personal Political Activity, Contributions, and Communication

SAP is proud that we are socially engaged and that we participate in the political process.

Your personal political engagement should take place outside of your working hours, unless explicitly permissible by local law.

Accordingly, any personal political contributions are not reimbursed by SAP. SAP does not make direct contributions for political purposes to political parties, politicians, or political organizations other than through event sponsorships and related marketing as allowed by law and specifically approved by SAP Global Government Affairs and the Office of Ethics & Compliance (OEC).

You must also ensure that your political activities reflect only your personal views and do not give the impression that any of these activities are connected to SAP.

7.5.2 Lobbying

Policymaking and legislation have a significant impact on our business. We are committed to engaging appropriately in the public policy process as an important means of enhancing shareholder value, a fundamental principle for free and democratic societies.

SAP, by way of SAP Global Government Affairs, engages with governments around the world on public policy issues that are core to our business. Lobbying is an appropriate way for us to educate policymakers about the legitimate interests of SAP and to participate in political decision-making processes. We believe that by sharing our expertise and communicating our position on certain topics, we contribute responsibly to policymaking. These communications must be conducted and reported in compliance with all applicable laws.

It is our policy to comply with the lobbying laws and restrictions of every jurisdiction where we conduct business, and to be as transparent as possible in lobbying activities and the engagement of lobbyists. As the regulation of lobbying activity varies widely across jurisdictions, a detailed knowledge of the legal requirements is needed. Further, as a company, we must speak with one knowledgeable and contemplative voice. Lobbying activities are therefore solely managed by SAP Global Government Affairs.

We are committed to engaging appropriately in the public policy process.

7.5.3 Memberships in professional or political organizations

In principle, we believe that memberships in professional organizations are worth supporting, as among other things, they provide us with the ability to take part in shaping and developing standards and best practices of the profession.

However, we as SAP act very cautiously in our political activities. If SAP pays for your membership in a group that has political affiliation or appears to be associated with it, you must align with SAP Global Government Affairs before becoming a member. Of course, you may become a private member in such an organization at any time. However, SAP does not reimburse any costs or expenses.

For information on corporate memberships, see the “Corporate Sponsorships, Memberships, and Donations” section of this Code.
